

[Smoke detectors for your home]

Of those who lost life due to the fire during 2004, 89.6% of those people died in house fires.

The main reason responsible for the deaths was that people failed to escape in time.

In most of fire cases, fire can be sensed by your eyes, nose, or ears at first.

However, when you are asleep or concentrating on one thing in a closed room, you may not be able to notice the fire and fail to escape.

To avoid such risk, the installment of smoke detectors by June 1, 2009 is now mandatory as the device can detect an outbreak of fire in your house and alarm by buzzer or voice.
